WestWind Journal Update

It's hard to believe, but September marks the one year anniversary of the relaunch of the monthly WestWind Journal.

Due to publication deadlines with some past issues, the Journal was being published and sent to you at the end of each month.

Starting with the September's issue, rather than sending each issue at the end of the month, the Journal will be delivered to you during the first week of each month. This will help ensure that we're sending airline notices, monthly statistics and pilot accolades in a timely manner.

And thus the reason for the short August Express issue. An action packed September Journal will be delivered just around the corner. Enjoy!

WestWind Hub Updates for XP12.2 Continues

Bob Sturm, VP of Scenery, continues to update WestWind hubs.

With the release of 12.2, I have resumed updating the WestWind Hubs. There is not likely to be any major changes.

The new release includes additional assets (scenery objects) which will allow for additional eye candy. There will likely be some corrections that were missed the first time around. It will be required that you are using the version 12.2 for any of these new enhancements to work.

IMPORTANT: Be sure to first delete any previous version of your hub scenery. These update will not be overwrites. Watch the Scenery category of this forum for announcements of new airports.

There are many new enhancements and fixes that make version 12.2 worth downloading.

X-Plane 12.2.0 Release Notes

Welcome to X-Plane 12.2.0! This major graphics-focused update brings a host of improvements, including a long-awaited dark-cockpit fix, a completely overhauled cloud rendering system, and new tonemapping for more realistic lighting. Atmospheric rendering has been enhanced for better sky colors and cloud shadows, while stability updates ensure smoother performance. Aircraft braking systems have been refined with new parking brake and chock options, and ATC has received critical fixes. Plus, airport-specific ground textures have been improved, and a fresh gateway scenery cut is now available. Dive in and explore the latest advancements!
